

BULLHORN

The beast are huge colossi, vast lumps of flesh and muscle, with one imperative - to eat. Nothing will stop them, and they will ignore all damage, even grievous wounds, to continue eating. They have evolved for just such a purpose, using anything from thick, battering-ram style plate to ash-hardened, diamond-tipped paws to crush anything that gets in the way of their next meal.

The bullhorn can be included in any game of Operation Artemis and is controlled by the Fauna player but doesn't count it as a Friendly model. It moves and attacks as described on its Character card that can be seen below.

After both sides have deployed but before the first turn begins. The Fauna player can place the Bullhorn miniature in base contact with any peice of Difficult Terrain that is not in the PHR player's deployment zones.

Any number of Bullhorn's can be included in a game of Operation Artemis but only one Bullhorn can be placed in base contact with each peice of Difficult Terrain. If there are multiple Bullhorn's on the Board resolve each of their Doze Through one at a time.

Bellow: When this model is destroyed, the defender rolls 1 . On a success add 3 to the Noise.

Doze Through: This model does not move normally, instead at the end of the round it moves towards the nearest Model. Turn the Bullhorn to face the nearest visible model and roll 1  for each level of Threat and move the Bullhorn that many inches in a straight line. The Bullhorn can move through other models when making this move. This move is ended if the Bullhorn comes in contact with Impassable Terrain.

Any model that the Bullhorn moves through, takes an attack from the Thick Skull.

Lumbering Beast: Whenever this Model moves through difficult ground put the noise up by 1.
